CHAPTER V.

The wind mouned dismally around the pretty old ivy covered Vicarage, and the brown leaves here as my wife!" were falling in showers over the beds from which the brilliant hued flowers had faded, when Vere Walleran was permitted to leave the room in which she had been so long a prisoner, and join the group round the bright dining-room fire.

'Now that is something like being jolly, to see you in the midst of us all again,' Archie exclaimed as he placed a stool near Vere's sofa, and seated himself thereon.

· I have been a great trouble-a great anxiety to you all.' Vere said; and I am very sorry. Wby, what a long time I have been upstairs! It was a bright summer day the morning that I came here, and now everything seems dying, or like my hopes, dead. I have nothing in the world to live for now.'

'Hush, darling,' Louie said softly; ' no one ought to say that. If for nothing else you must

'Live for those who love you, For those you know are true-For the heaven that smiles above you, For the good that you can do.'

· Very proper,' remarked Archie. 'And now Vere, you must let me tell you, now that you are off the sick-list, that we are not going to let you return to a morbid state of mind. I land. It was the first intimation she had had shall drive you out every fine day, and keep that her father had been in the slightest degree you up to the mark; and you shall stay at the embarrassed in his affairs, and it grieved her to Vicarage, and never return to dismal old Earlsland again-shall she, mother? It's enough to give her the blues."

'I think, Vere,' said Mrs. Talbot, 'that we all look upon you as one of the family; and, if ed the gate. you are contented and happy here, why not make up your mind to remain with us.'

'I think that is a grand idea, Mrs. Talbot,' interrupted a voice outside the door; 'and, if you have no objection to take in outsiders, here came into the room.

Amidst much laughter and chatter Vere held out her hand to him, a vivid blush dyeing her white delicate cheeks as the remembrance of their last meeting recurred to her.

And so it was arranged that Vere was to make the pretty ivy-covered Vicarage her home until the long winter season had passed away. and spring had ushered brighter days and a sweeter life into the sad young heart which had barden of sorrow laid upon it so early.

As the days passed on, Vere gradually gained health and strength, and somewhat of the old brightness would shine in her matchless dark eyes, or ring out in her clear happy laugh at the merry speeches of Archie, or the quaint humor of the kind old Vicar. As the early afternoons closed in and the darkness fell. Vere would lie on her sofa and listen all unconsciously to herself, for the sound of the click of the little gate, and the ring of a firm quick step upon the grayel walk. Then Bryan would come in, bringing his own bright smile and happy heart sunshine, and filling the Vicarage diningroom with the sweetness and beauty of contentment and peace. If any one had told Vere that she was beginning to listen for the sound of Bryan's footstep, and that she grew brighter at his coming, she would have laughed and replied that any one else would amuse her just as well. Nevertheless, his songs with Louise, his jokes with Archie, and his clever conversation with the Vicar, were welcome variations in the monotony of her daily life.

On one of those beautiful evenings, when spring merges into summer, when the air seems laden with the incense of flowers and the sweetness and melody of the even song of birds. Vere stood with her hat in her hand at the Vicarage gate. The bloom of health shone upon her soft rounded cheek, and a happiness which she did not recognize slumbered in the fathomless depths of her brown eyes. Presently there sounded down the road the step she knew so well and waited for.

I know I am late,' Bryan said, as he unlatched the gate for her to pass through-'it was unavoidable. I had some business to settle just as I was leaving. But it is not too late. Vere, for a short stroll. We must not for her.' stay long, or Mrs. Talbot will lecture me.'

It was so calm that scarce the feathery weed, Sown by some eagle on the topmost stone, Swayed in the air, as Bryan and Vere took the road from the Vicarage to Earlsland. It was nearly twelve months since that bright morning-which seem- Talbot. 'Confound my stupidity!' he muttered, taking it from her. 'I would have given much for you not to have asked me that question, anything false. The estate was sold 'wo years ought.'

'Sold!' she repeated-' two years ago! Then it is not my home now? I have no home!' and Vere sobbed bitterly as she sat on the floor amongst the scattered papers. Bryan knelt down by her side, and gently put his arm 'Do not weep, my darling,' he whispered. 'I

CHAPTER VI.

There was nothing to prevent the immediate anion of Bryan and Vere, and early one bright morning before the summer leaves had changed to the russet brown of autumn, a quiet weding took place at Westmere, and Vere Walleran gave all her future life into Bryan Fairfax's keeping. Flowers were strewn upon her bridal path, and the bells clashed noisily as they did their atmost in honor of the daughter of the kind old squire, as they walked in all the beauty and freshness of youth down the old-fash-

'I doubt greatly whether she's got the right sort of a husband at last, Betty,' said one old woman to another as they passed. 'Do ve mind that handsome young gentleman as folks said was to be married to her, only he was drowned? He was more the sort of husband for one so young and pretty as Miss Vere." The ears of the bride caught the words as she passed, and like a poisonous seed which is blown by the slightest breeze, they were desined to take root and bear fruit in due season.

The wedding breakfast over, the bride and bridegroom started for the Continent. Louise Talbot was to have constant news of their whereabouts: and these letters, as they arrived, she read aloud at breakfast time, for the benefit of her parents and brother.

'Mamma,' she said, on one occasion, naving concluded one of her friend's long letters, 'I wonder whether Vere is perfectly happy? She fills her letters with her travels; we hear of her in the Alps, at Munich, at Innsbrick, and on her way to the Tyrol; but I never see one word about her being happy, and she does not ofte n mention Bayan.'

'Well, of all the insanely womanish remarks lever heard, I never listened to anything so perfectly foolish!' exclaimed Archie, 'Why Louie, what a muff you are! You seem to have an idea that when a girl marries, she must fill her letters with 'my husband this' and 'my husband that' and 'we are happy as the day is long' and all that sort of girl's trash. I can only tell you one thing-if ever I caught the girl I married writing such bosh, I would box her ears

'I am sadly afraid that the girl you marry will not have as much to praise and admire in her husband as Vere has,' remarked Louie. 'But don't you think it strange, mamma,' she asked.

'I certainly think it a more natural proceeding that she should mention him,' said Mrs. happiness in the heart, I think it generally

'Leave Bryan! Leave my husband! Not for the world. I love him.

'You love him! Why, Vere, every one says that you married him for Earlsland. We will leave him and his property and live for each other. Come!' and he stood up and laid a hand upon her shoulder. 'No, no, I cannot go-I do not wish to go.' 'But you must,' he replied; 'you are not happy here, and I must take you away with me.' and stooping down he raised her in his arms. 'Bryan, Bryan! save me oh, save me!' she screamed. A gentle hand was laid upon her head, and her husband's loving voice fell upon

Bryan's reply was a glad one, and his wife kissed him lovingly for it. As she did so, across the snow and through the midnight air came the old familiar chimes which she had heard in her old home from childhood, and their message of love seemed to fill her heart.

'The 'true peace on earth' has come at last, Bryan,' she said, 'and in its strength and beauty every foolish, romantic feeling I ever had seems to melt away. From their ashes let us pray that the truer, nobler life may arise.

> > THE STATE DEBT.

The substitute from the Committee on Revenue, Taxation and Public Debt was considered. It provides that the General Assembly shall have no power to levy taxes for the payment or adjustment of more than five per cent. of the principal of the bonds of the State, known as special tax bonds, and thirty-three per cent. of all other bonds of the State, until the question of such additional levy shall have been submitted to the qualified voters of the State for their approval or disapproval, and shall have been approved by a majority thereof. And no part of the interest which has accrued, or which may hereafter accrue, upon any of the bonds of the State, shall ever be paid.

Mr. Jarvis moved an amendment to strike out the words " more than five per cent. of the principal of" the bonds of the State, which amendment, if it prevailed, would prohibit the Legislature from levying any tax to pay any part of the special tax bonds.

Mr. Tourgee submitted a substitute, providing that as the debt of the State is more than the people in their impoverished condition can pay, a Tribunal of Arbitration shall be established to which the whole debt of the State shall be submitted, the said arbitrators not to be citizens of the State and their action to be

Mr. Jarvis, dem., advocated his amendment, reviewing the action of the Legislature which anthorized the onerous debt under which the State is groaning. He said the order of the day at that time upon this floor, was to vote away a million of dollars of the people's money. 'Vere, Vere!' he said, in a voice that thrilled walk to another portion of the Capitol into Lither heart, 'open the window, darling—it is I!' tleficld's bar-room, take a drink, and come back Another moment and Mrs. Fairfax stord in., into the hall and vote away millions more. His the snow outside clasped in the arms of Chol-amendment might be called repudiation, if it was so wished, but the effect of it would be to prohibit the Legislature from ever levving a tax to pay interest upon the special tax bonds, which were conceived in fraud, rocked in the eradle of iniquity, born in corruption and prostituted to the basest purposes-the work of the Legislature of 1868-'69. The word "repudiation" in connection with these bonds was what the people of North Carolina wanted.

Mr. Clingman opposed Mr. Jarvis' amendment, as it would work hardship to innocent bondholders. He thought the matter had better be left to the Legislature for adjustment.

Mr. Boyd, rep., did not hesitate to be placed upon the record as being in favor of the utter repudiation of the special tax bonds. The existence of these bonds, hanging over us, would said this debt was enacted in fraud, and notwithstanding the fact that the larger majority of the Legislature which created these bonds belonged to the party to which he belonged, he was free to admit that undue influences were used to bring about their passage; his party was held responsible for the passage of these acts, but he claimed that some of the Democrats of the State had received large benefits therefrom. The people of the State to-day were in no condition to pay the taxes that would be necessary should the fraudulent bonds be recognized in any manner.

Mr. Allman moved that the whole matter be recommitted to the Committee. After much discussion, Mr. Turner called the previous question, which being sustained, the motion to recommit prevailed by a vote of 49

Mr. Jarvis moved that the ordinance in regard to the repudiation of the special tax bonds be made the special order for 11 o'elock Monday. Mr. Jarvis said the people demanded and he would insist on a vote being taken on ihis question before the Convention adjourned; that in regard to it.

On motion of Mr. Turner, the rules were suspended, and the ordinance declaring that secret political societies are dangerous to the liberties of a free people and should not be tolerated.

Ordinance to strike out sec. 33, art. 4 of the Constitution, being a substitute from the committee, was considered. This ordinance degranted them, and allows the General Assembly to define their jurisdiction.

Mr. Jarvis, dem., explained the necessity of placing in the hands of the Legislature the powor to arrange the jurisdiction of the Justices of the Peace, as occasion might at any time re- callings of the roll, and a large number of the quire a change, and not make it necessary to go to the expense of changing the Constitution when any change in this jurisdiction may be needed.

Mr. Barringer favored the ordinance to strike out. He had always favored the county court system. The present system worked injury to all classes, and cheap courts should be established. Yet he thought no Legislature would ever do this, and hence that body should have the power to say where the jurisdiction of Magietrates should commence and end.

The substitute was adopted by a vote of 51 to Ordinance to amend sec. 6, art. 1, relating to the public debt of the State. Mr. Turner submitted a substitute from the Committee on Bill of Rights, providing that the State shall never pay or assume any debt inenrred since the 1st day of January, 1868, and prior to the 1st day of January, 1875, in aid of any railroad corporation under any ordinence, resolution or act by any Convention or General citizen shall be restored to the rights of citizen-Assembly, and the General Assembly shall not

Mr. Durham submitted a substitute, being the same as submitted Saturday from the Committee on Public Debt, except that part which provided that no interest which has accrued been naturalized, twenty-one years old or upor may hereafter accrue upon any bonds of the State shall ever be paid.

Mr. Jarvis moved an amendment striking out that portion which gives the General Assembly the power to levy a tax to pay any part of the special tax bonds. Adopted.

Ordinance relating to suffrage and eligibility to office (published yesterday) came up on its third reading. It requires ninety days' residence in a county to entitle one to vote, and prevents felons and convicted criminals f.iom voting or holding office. Republicans spoke in opposition to the ordi-

Mr. Jarvis argued in favor of the passage of the ordinance as a matter of simple justice to the honest voters of the State.

Mr. Turner followed in favor of the ordinance He was surprised at the zeal shown by some members in their opposition to this measure, which called for nothing more than protection to the honest voters of the State.

Mr. Durham moved the previous question.

Mr. Buxton's amendment to require 60 days residence instead of 90 was lost. Cary's proviso, that no person disfranchised under this act should be required to pay taxes, was lost by a vote of 47 to 59.

THE CONVENTION .- As will be seen from Monday's proceedings, the Convention adjourned on Monday evening. It has done much, we think, which will prove beneficial, if adopted by the people at the ballot box. Some things which we would like to have seen incorporated in the State Constitution have been left undone, no doubt, owing to the determination of the Republican members to embarras the Convention as much as possible and to retard its progress. We will publish the ordinances adopted as soon as they come to hand.

MISSISSIPPI.-A despatch from Senator Alcorne feet except to quicken the 2.40 gait at which lated Friar's Point. Oct. 8, to the Attorney General, at Washington, relative to the negro insurrection in Mississippi, is reliable: "Having read several incorrect and sensational dispatches, touching the recent troubles at Friar's Point, I beg to assure you that there need be no alarm for the peace of this county. Several hundred armed negroes who had been incited by an ill-tempered chief, marched on our town, but were rapidly repulsed by the whites, under the lead of the most prudent citizens, who have been following the armed bands of negroes and dispersing them with as little violence as possible, and urging them to go home. The mob has been dispersed and I think will remain quiet. There is no question of politics in this excitement. The whites are, to a man, on the defense. Those of the negroes who have been misled are fast being recon-

DIED.

Suddenly, at his residence in Yadkin county, N. ., on the 7th inst, Tyre GLENN, Esq., aged 74 years 9 months and 10 days.

Mr. Glenn had been in a declining state of health for several weeks, having chills part of the time; but there was no very serious apprehension of his death. He told one of his sons the week before, that he did not expect to live much longer,—that he had done the best he could, and was willing to leave the rest with God. He was a highly respected citizen, widely known. He made a profession of religion in 1870, and was baptized, by Eld. Wm. Turner, into the fellowship of Union Hill Baptist Church, on the 2nd Sabbath in December, 1870. The funeral sermon was preached by Eld. Turner, on the 9th inst., under the trees beside the open grave, near the family res-

AGUE CONQUEROR;

NO QUININE, NO ARSENIC, NO POISONS. This is strong language, as Physicians and Chemists have for years tried to compound a preparation that would entirely cure FEVER AND AGUE without the use of strong medicines such as Quinine, Arsenic and other poisons injurious to the system. There is no ease of Fever and Ague, Intermittent or Bilions Fevers, Congestive Chills, Night Sweats, Liver Complaints &c., that this remedy will not cure at once and permanently. It purifies the Blood, Liver, Spleens, and all secreatory organs so effectually that the Chills will not return during the season. even when persons have had them for years. Sold at V. O.
